MAXWELL'S LECTURES ON THE HOME

The wage earners of the country and those who would ameliorate the hard conditions of the laboring man and see him established in comfort in a home of his own will find some interest and profit in the campaign and lecture tour which is being made throughout the west by George H. Maxwell, executive chairman of the National Irrigation Association. Mr. Maxwell has spoken at the principal cities in Montana and his program takes him also through Washington, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas and North Dakota, besides large eastern centers.

The lamp of hope which he held out to the west and to the country at large in a speech at Great Falls, Mont., was that the idea should be fostered that any strong man can from one acre of good ground get a good living for himself and his family.

"Get an acre and live on it!" he said. "Get an acre and live on it! I wish I could burn that thought into the heart of every working man in America. In the west I would say, 'Get an irrigated acre.' Mr. Maxwell declared that if every man who now works eight hours a day in a factory or a smelter could work four hours a day in the factory and four hours a day on his own acre of irrigated land, he would double his income and he would insure himself, his wife and his children against want when the day's wage should stop.

Change Educational System.

"But we must have a different system of national education from the present one," he said, "which trains our children away from the land. This idea is gaining ground. We have manual training and domestic science taught in our schools. That is getting back to the true system of education, where instead of the old folks remaining at home to die alone while the boys go to the cities with the idea of becoming millionaires, but to end as counter jumpers and clerks, the making and keeping of a home is taught.

"One more thing should be coupled to the school system. Every child should be made a gardener and horticulturist. The winter term should be devoted half to books and half to work on the benches, and a summer term should be devoted to agriculture. The boys would learn to build a home and the girls to care for them as wives and mothers.

Better than Prohibition Laws.

"The way to close the saloon is to teach the girls to cook. Many a man has gone wrong because a woman could not cook. The summer school should be at the edge of the city, where children could attend it from the kindergarten to the high school. They could be taught to raise everything on five acres that goes to make a home. We are gradually getting away from the heresy that money is all in this life and that man must raise something, sell it and buy something back again before he gets what he wants. God intended us to make a living directly from the land.

The evil of our life is not that the rich are getting richer or the poor are getting poorer, but it is the lack of cultivation of the soil. No man can oppress a sturdy race of farmers that own and till the land.

Resources of the Treasure State.

"There are great resources in Montana, but if the people want to develop them on sound and enduring lines, they must be developed in such a way that the mass of the people will be rooted to the soil. Her mines are wondrous in their productiveness, but her greatest wealth lies in her rich soil.

"You have great water power here at Great Falls, the greatest, I believe, of any state in the union, and you may produce here a second Chicago, with all its squalor, its slums, its immorality, its crimes, its starvation when the day's wage stops.

"But you do not want that. You want to lay here a foundation, broad and deep, for an entirely different condition, and the laying of that foundation has been begun as the result of the unparalleled achievements of a grand old man, Senator Paris Gibson, whom the people of this city in days to come will revere and honor as one of the greatest minds that the west has ever produced.

Farm Acre Colonies

"The movement is already begun to establish farm acre colonies where men in the east who have a little money can come out onto an acre of land and live there for a year or two years and be taught how to farm. Then they will be colonist farmers worth having, and this will relieve, too, the congested centers of the east.

"There are thousands and hundreds of thousands of such men in the east, and every live community in the west should plant such a farm instruction colony. The work has been begun in Arizona, and when its good results are seen, the plan will be adopted by every western section, for it will appeal to all classes. It will appeal to every western man who desires to see his country settled by thrifty citizens; it will appeal to the merchant; it will appeal to the man who has land to sell.

"If a man, intent upon accomplishing the most with a large tract of land, had one million acres, and it were possible for him to have a prosperous family on every five acres, would he divide it into farms of a square mile or of a quarter section? With small farms come good roads. The dreaded isolation of the old farm life gives away to neighbors every few hundred yards, and all the comforts of modern civilization become possible.

Our Greatest National Resource.

"The land is the greatest resource of a nation. Our public lands should be securely held for the real home-makers. There are men in the west who have acquired, as was never intended by Congress, great tracts of thousands of acres of land without settlement and without the building of a single home.

"These laws are still upon the statute books. Moreover the great livestock interests and the speculators are intent upon keeping them there and even upon attempting to secure new land speculative legislation."

ON LECTURE TOUR.

Rev. Jonathan Edwards Begins Series of Lectures Which Will Extend Through the Winter.

Rev. Edwards, who recently resigned from the pastorate of the Congregational church of this city, will begin a series of lectures on the "Fundamental Principles of Christianity," the first lecture to be delivered at St. Johns, Wash., on November 12, the second at Endicott about December 1.

This series of lectures will be independent of any bureau or organization, but will be a part of a general advance plan of the Congregational church, to take a forward step in evangelization. Everywhere in the United States lecturers and ministers will begin this independent work, in the effort to harmonize higher criticism, which has become a factor in church work and thought, during the past few years, with the deep spiritual force of religion.

Dr. Edwards will make other appointments as the season advances, and it is his plan to spend most of his time henceforth, on the lecture platform.

"HEART OF CHICAGO."

Great Scenic Play at the Frazer Tuesday Night.

"The Hills of California" was presented at the Frazer Saturday night by an able company. The attendance was good and the production was pleasing. The humor of this rural drama is catching and really funny. And the play has its pathos too.

The next attraction at the Frazer will be Lincoln J. Carter's famous "Heart of Chicago." Tuesday night. This play is a great scenic production and is considered one of the best of the series written by Carter.

The pope's health is much improved during the past few days.

The Monster Viceroy of Manchuria

The most interesting figure of the moment in the East is neither Russian nor Japanese, but is a Chinaman, the chung choong, or Chinese viceroy of Manchuria. To afford him a spectacle, to impress him with the might and potency of civilized arms, General Kuropatkin halted his troops at Mukden.

To earn his approbation and the approval of Pekin, the Japanese pushed on their advance north of their natural frontier at Liao Yang. In the hands of this man, the viceroy of Manchuria, the Tartar general of Mukden, the keeper of the imperial tombs, the guardian of the sacred palace, lies the key to the political situation in Manchuria.

The safety of the long lines of Japanese communications from Dalny to Liao Yang, from the Yalu to the Taisho, and of the longer lines of Russian communications from Mukden to Manchuria lies at his disposition.

Quiet of manner and gentle of voice, it is difficult to realize that the Tartar general of Mukden condemns to death each year in his yamen a thousand of his subjects. Each afternoon of my five months' stay in the province of Mukden two or three, sometimes five or six, bedraggled Chinamen were decapitated in the barren potter's field beyond the Little West Gate of the capital.

In the outer courts of his yamen I have seen such exhibitions of torture, such bastinadoings and whippings, such racking of joints and twisting of muscles as turn my heart sick at the recollection.

Yet is the viceroy himself essentially a mild-mannered man, a literateur and a patron of the fine arts. The first time I was received by him was an occasion of much ceremony.

I was ushered in between long lines of mandarins, through the central doors that open only for those whom his excellency deigns to honor. That morning he had refused an audience to his excellency, the Viceroy Alexieff on the plea of ill health, and the honor done myself was designed to emphasize the significance of the excuse.

The chung choong, robed in the imperial yellow of his office, alone seated himself with me at the table in his reception pavilion. Pig-tailed retainers served sweet champagne and cakes, fruit and the customary tea.

We talked much of the situation and the troubles of his people. I asked how long he had ruled in Manchuria. His answer was brief but significant:

"Six unhappy years."

In those years his province has been devastated by three wars, his capital has been sacked by the mob and occupied by the Russians, his power has been filched from him, his life has been demanded as the price of his part of the Boxer uprising, his royal state has been exchanged for the condition of a prisoner, he has contemplated suicide.

His suicide undoubtedly would have been effected had it not been for an excess of filial piety. His mother was still alive, an aged lady of some 80 years. To his Chinese mind it would have been an unworthy thing to leave this world before the mother who bore him. So he lived.

Besides, he has no son to do his memory fitting honor, to worship at his grave. As Mencius has said: "There are three things which are unfilial, and to have no posterity is the greatest of these." The chung choong could not depart this life with so great a sin upon his conscience.

Accordingly, some weeks before my arrival in Mukden, he put away his barren wife and adopted a more probable bearer. When last I was received by him, on August 17, I asked after the health of his lady. The viceroy's face beamed with gladness. "Three weeks ago she bore me a son."

Most severely has the presence of the viceroy strained the tact of the Russians in Mukden. His yamen has been a privileged center of espionage. He himself has taken a delight in refusing buildings for hospitals, in placing difficulties in the way of his most unwelcome guests, in propounding nasty political problems for solution. Whichever combatant holds Mukden bears the responsibility for all the indignities thrust upon the Chinese by the exigencies of the military situation. The chung choong cannot wield full power in a province occupied by troops of another nation, and yet whoever removes that power from him incurs the danger of the enmity of China.

The Russians have dealt wisely with the problem, have repeated the sanctity of the imperial tombs, have preserved from harm the treasures of the sacred palace. Their task has been no light one, has been performed with considerable success. The viceroy's last anxious query to me was, "Do you think there will be a battle at Mukden?" The Japanese are now at the gates. If they win in the fight, to the victors will be the spoils of a most heavy responsibility.—Douglas Story.
